U.S. Officer Turns Detective To Avenge

The Murder Of Captured RAF Pilot

ABETRAYED BY WIFE GREATEST MAN-HUNT

"People" Exclusive From EVADNE PRICE

Weilburg (Germany), Saturday.

I HAVE JUST WATCHED A NAZI MURDERER TAKEN AWAY FOR TRIAL BY ROYAL AIR FORCE POLICE FROM THE MILITARY GOVERNMENT OFFICES HERE. FOR MONTHS THE AUTHORITIES IN BOTH THE BRITISH AND AMERICAN SECTORS HAVE SCoured OVER 4,000 SQUARE MILES OF TERRITORY SEARCHING FOR HIM. WITH HIS CAPTURE THE GREATEST MAN-HUNT OF ALL TIME HAS ENDED.

It is entirely owing to the brilliant detective work of an American Military Government officer that this criminal, S.S. Oberleutnant Heinrich Ugrig, was yesterday brought to justice.

The story of the spectacular and difficult man-hunt might have been the basis of a crime novel. Instead, it is a grim record of fact.

It began, a week before war ended, in a small town in the Cologne area.

An RAF pilot came down by parachute and was captured by Ugrig, who handcuffed him and paraded him through the town in uniform, where the German women mobbed him, beat him, pelted him with rotten vegetables, insulted him and jeered at him until they tired of the sport.

Then the brave S.S. Oberleutnant took the helpless boy into a near-by wood and callously shot him in the back, leaving the body where it fell. When the British came, there they found him. Dozens of witnesses testified to the identity of the murderer, Ugrig. A minute description of him was circulated, and the hunt began.

But Ugrig had vanished, and nothing was heard of him until last week. Then Lieut. Gerald Ziskind, of the American Military Government at Weilburg, received a report of a man whose description tallied with that of the missing war criminal.

Ziskind checked on this personally, and became convinced that Ugrig was in his district.

Ace M.G. Sleuth

In civilian life Lieut. Ziskind is a lawyer and a student of criminology as well. He has tracked down more Nazi war criminals than any other M.G. official.

He studied this Ugrig case, and decided that the food shortage might eventually show the whereabouts of the missing man. It was a shrewd deduction.

A few days later a report came in that large supplies of potatoes were being delivered from Ugrig's father to a certain address near Frankfurt. Ziskind went there immediately, to find that Ugrig had left the previous day, and that his wife had visited him there.

That the American was on the track all right. He cross-examined the husband, and learned that Frau Ugrig had mentioned a certain town. There he found her, and brought her to Weilburg for questioning.

"It was easy enough from then on," Lieut. Ziskind told me in his quiet, clear voice. "She denied meeting her husband. I said: 'You began to beguile me.'

"I love Another."

"I called you another for ten minutes. Then," he told her, "I'm not arguing. I'm charging you with betraying your husband, a war criminal, and I'll give you 24 hours to reveal his location. Failing to do so, you will be sentenced to ten years' imprisonment."

"She knew I'd got her, so she dried her tears magically and agreed to my calculations."

"But," he said, "you must keep it secret that I gave given my husband's name. If she told another man, an Allied officer, and he gives me too, and if you show me, my officer will kill me."

"But my husband's relatives know I have told, they will kill me."

Lieut. Ziskind was adamant. No conditions. She would tell him where Ugrig was, or go to prison. And 12 hours later she made a full confession.

She told him Ugrig was working on a farm near by, about 15 miles from the nearest town. He had scoured 4,000 square miles for him. He had "seen" him several times, and had changed his name.

Then Lieut. Ziskind played the detective of fiction. He disguised his emotions, disguised his voice, and in German civilian clothes he made a house-to-house search. Dramatically, he caught Ugrig in the local brewer's office. He took the food card, and preparing to flee to a new address.

Patience,
Says Mr.
Truman

"It would be in the interests of the U.S. to conduct a foreign policy of full participation in international affairs," said President Truman in a letter published yesterday.

The policy, said the President, will demand of all in great patience, and more than that, a much clearer understanding than we have ever had of the problems of other people.

Unless we exercise this patience and attain this understanding, we will be widespread disillusionment and a loss of faith in the possibility of an expanding, international collaboration.

LADY ELEANOR SMITH

Lady Eleanor Smith, author sister of the Duke of Athlone, died in London yesterday. She was forty-two. An authority on circus life, the Romanies and the ballet, she wrote among other novels, "The Man in Grey," "Caravan" and "Ballerina," based on the life of Anna Pavlova, Russian dancer.

U-Boat Killers To Die

From McFee KERR, Reuter's Special Correspondent

Hamburg, Saturday.

THREE German U-boat men are to die by shooting for the murder of British and Allied sailors in the Atlantic in March, 1944.

They are Capt. Heinz Eck, commander of the U-852, and

Walter Priess, a British and Greek

marine. Lieut. August Hoffman and Naval Surgeon

Schneider.

The two other accused received

long terms of imprisonment—life

for the murder of British and Greek

marine. Lieut. August Hoffman and Naval Surgeon

Schneider.

The five men were found guilty

after a four-day trial, by a court

composed of British and Greek officers on a charge of committing

a war crime by murdering British Allied and British seamen of the stranger Pelus, by machine-gun fire, they were in the water and clinging to rafts.

Only three members of the ship crew were killed, after drifting

for 37 days on the wreckage of the ship. The crew of the U-852

was captured after the

PRIEST TO

RUN STAR

RADIO

From Our Special Correspondent

Hollywood, Saturday.

ROMAN CATHOLIC

priest, the Rev.

Patrick Peyton, who came to Hollywood

with the idea of starting a new radio programme, has booked up dozens of the top screen and radio

stars.

Some of them are accounted to get anything up to 2,200 for a half-hour broadcast.

But the Rev. Patrick Peyton is not paying out big sums like that.

In fact, he arrived in Hollywood

without a penny in his pocket.

All he had was the belief that he could help bring together those families that had drifted apart

during the war.

The sceptics told the good

Father not to hope in Hollywood.

The priest persevered. He had nothing to lose, anyway—and in a few days he discovered that typists were offering their services

free.

Stiers of every religion have agreed to appear. They include

Frank Crosby, Frank Sinatra,

Gene Kelly, Gloria Young,

Charles Rogers, Eddie Cantor,

Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman,

Margaret O'Brien, Edward G.

Robinson, Jack Benny, William

Bend Sin, and Shirley Temple.

It is expected that the programme, tentatively called

"Golden Her Day," will begin in a few weeks' time, and will last for 60 Sundays.

Drought Ends

HEAVY rain at Torquay yesterday afternoon broke a drought which had lasted since

September 24.

Spot lights had to be put on at the town hall as the town was overshadowed by dense clouds and rain in torrents.

The turn in the weather conditions has spoiled outdoor

tomatoes, but South Devon

growers have had a big crop

ripening during the extra spell of wet weather.

There is light engineering

firms, cosmetic manufacturers,

mob makers, furniture makers,

food processors, chocolate

makers, cycle manufacturers, and clothing firms.

The London Midland and Scottish Railway alone has had 128

applications for private sidings

accommodation and sites for new works.

The lands applied for are reattered all over the system, but proximity to London seems to be the first desire.

Powell Forgot Injury To Score Only Goal

ENGLAND 0 WALES 1

GLANLANS, Saturday for the past three years, were defeated by a characteristically Welsh side, and the Welsh national football team, who were defeated by a 3,000 crowd at West Bromwich yesterday.

TURNER INSPIRED CHARLTON LINE

CHARLTON'S superior defense and organized defense, which nullified the attacking backs and halves, was up to the mark, and the team triumphed in a goalless draw. The Welsh captain, Arthur Jones, was the only player to score, and he did so in the 33rd minute when he scored the only goal of the match.

Turner, from the highest valley, was also much superior forward. Chris Turner, who made Charlton's first goal, headed by himself, was the leader and inspiration of the team. He was the only player to score, and he did so in the 33rd minute when he scored the only goal of the match.
